PREFACE

THE Author of the following Work, animated with a desire of excelling in his Profession, and of executing the duties of his staff employment with that degree of accuracy and precision necessary for conducting the movements of an army, in such regularity and good order as is absolutely requisite for the good of the service ; and, as a thorough knowledge of the Roads, Towns, and even Villages of Note in the Kingdom, must be allowed the first essential towards the wished-for accomplishment, he has, for many years past, made it a great part of his study to attain that end. Herein he had so far succeeded some time ago, as to venture, through the persuasion of his friends, to lay before the Public a new Production, which he trusted would recommend itself to their attention and protection ; not more from its general utility, than from the novelty of the plan upon which it was constructed, whereby it attained an evident superiority over any work of the same nature which had theretofore appeared.

The reception which the First Edition has been honoured with, from a generous Public, has encouraged the Author to persevere in his favourite pursuit, sparing neither pains or expence in procuring such materials as would enable him to improve upon the subject, and now lay before them a Second Edition, enriched with such additional matter, and other Improvements, both in Plan and Arrangement, as greatly contribute towards rendering it of the most general utility.

In this Performance, great care has been taken to procure the most authentic Surveys of the principal Roads of Great Britain; these are elegantly Engraved in 450 columns, each comprehending about 18 miles in length, and near 5 miles of the circumjacent country in width; and such seats of the nobility and gentry as occur in that space, are therein represented, with the name of the proprietor, where room would admit, otherwise a reference is made use of, and the name put either at the bottom, or in some blank part of the opening where the reference is.—At the top of each page is a summary of that part of the Road given therein, which may serve the Traveller as a compendium, or short account of the stages on the Road he proposes to take.

In some instances a road takes such a bend, as if continued in its proper direction, would carry the drawing out of the column; in this case the direction of the drawing is altered at the most convenient place, shewn by a straight dotted line across the column; and the quantity of such bend ascertained by the different directions of the compass, on each side of the line, as at Canterbury p. 4. Petersfield, p. 32. Arminster, p. 51, &c.

The Direct Roads of lesser Note, most of the Cross Roads, and Roads of Scotland, Circuits of the Judges, and Mail-Coach Roads, are described in Letter-press, to prevent swelling the Work to too great a size; and contrived so as to be read either upwards or downwards, in imitation of the engraved Roads, by which means we maintain a similarity throughout the whole, and gain a variety of other advantages, particularly pointed out in their proper places. See page 341 and 450.

The intermediate distances are placed opposite to the spaces betwixt the names, so as to be of equal use to the Traveller, whether coming from or going to any particular place: thus, for example, in page 369, whether you are going to, or coming from Banbury, it is equally plain that $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile is the distance betwixt Banbury and Warkworth; 8 miles betwixt Warkworth and Brackley;

ley; 3 betwixt Brackley and Westbury, and so forth.—This improvement will be found particularly useful in the Cross Roads, as by means thereof (for example) the Road from Ashbourn to Mansfield, Page 452, serves also as the Road from Mansfield to Ashbourn; from Ashbourn to Matlock; from Mansfield to Matlock; from Matlock to Ashbourn or Mansfield, and from either of them to each of the other intermediate places; so that in short, from any place, either in the Direct or Cross Roads, to any other in the same Road, you may easily ascertain both the intermediate and total distances; and, with a little attention, by help of the Index, conduct yourself through a variety of Roads, not to be numbered.

The Roads in Letter-prefs, being confined to one column of each page, we had an opportunity of appropriating the other to the entertainment of the Traveller, by giving him, each in their proper place, a description of Seats, Castles, Parks, Antiquities, Historical Anecdotes, Produce and Commerce of particular Places; together with Directions for turning, or altering his Course upon the Journey; and for finding the different Roads leading to his Destination, either from the Commencement of his Route, or from particular Places thereupon; each of these Remarks being either directly, or nearly opposite to the place where the Traveller's attention is required, he runs no risque of overlooking any part of them, which may tend either to his guidance or amusement.

In describing a lesser Road, branching from a greater, the last remarkable place on the great Road, or the spot from whence the lesser turns off, is first given, with a reference to the page in which you will find the Road from its commencement so far as to that place; and afterwards the branch is continued; as for example, to find the Road from London to Southampton, the Index directs you to Page 44, where you find the Road from Alvesford to that place, and are directed to look for the other part of the Road, viz. from London to Alresford, in Page 39.

At the commencement of the Description of each Road from London, is mentioned the Standard from whence the measurement is taken; which standards, with their respective distances from St. Paul's Cathedral, are as follow, viz.

N. B. A Coach, Landau, Chariot, or Phaeton, are all let at the same Rate with a Post Chaise, the Number of Horses only, making a Difference in Price.

If you hire a Carriage by the Day, and your Journey exceeds 20 Miles, you are frequently charged for each Mile above that Number, at the Rate of the stated Price per Mile, instead of the general Sum specified in the Table; and if you take the Horses farther than agreed for, you are liable to stand to the Loss, in case of any Accident happening to them. It is likewise to be observed, that travelling in your own Carriage makes no Difference in Point of Expence, the same Charge being made for Horses alone, as for Horses and Carriage together.

The hire of carriages less in common use is very uncertain, being generally bargained for with the inn-keeper, who also sets the price upon a saddle-horse in proportion to the length of your journey, or day's ride.

Besides the hire of your carriage, it is customary to give something to the driver in case of good behaviour; and though this present may vary, according to the different dispositions of the donors, yet it may not be amiss to acquaint a stranger to travelling, that in general the driver of a chaise and pair expects a shilling or eighteen-pence for each stage of 10 or 12 miles, and eighteen-pence or two shillings for those of greater length, besides some additional consideration in case of carrying three persons, travelling by night, long waiting, quick driving, or on sundry other pretences which His ingenuity is always ready enough to suggest.

✍ As many Changes of Property, and Alteration of Roads, are continually taking Place, the Proprietors, BOWLES and CARVER, No. 69, St. Paul's Church Yard, London, will be greatly obliged to any Gentleman who may communicate such Alteration, Addition, or Improvement of any Kind, as may tend to enrich a future Edition, directed as above, which will be duly attended to; and they further beg leave to return their most grateful Acknowledgements to those who have already supplied them with a great Variety of New Roads, useful Remarks, and other Improvements, which they will find carefully inserted in this Edition.

DIRECT ROADS, OF LESSER NOTE,

OR

BRANCHES FROM THE GREATER;

Described in Letter-press,

To prevent swelling the Work to too great a Size.

☞ This part of the Work is so contrived as to be read either upwards or downwards with equal facility, which not only continues a similarity through the whole; but it is presumed will be found no small improvement, as by this means, and by placing the intermediate distances betwixt the two names, a Traveller has the Road as amply described in returning from, as in going to, any particular place; as for instance, in the adjoining road from London to Sheerness, after he has got to Rochester, as in p. 2, according to the reference, he proceeds as below, reading upwards, $4\frac{1}{2}$ to Rainham, $2\frac{1}{2}$ to Newington-street, 1 to Key-street, and so on to Sheerness; whereas, if going from Sheerness to London, he would read downwards $1\frac{1}{2}$ to Blackfakes, 1 to Queenborough, 3 to King's Ferry, and so on to Rochester, from whence he proceeds to London, as in p. 2, the total distance of each intermediate place from London, being equally applicable in either case.

Cities are printed in Roman Capitals, as YORK.

County Towns in Italic Capitals, as READING.Market Towns, Post Towns, and principal Stages, in Italics, as Dartford.

The Column of Figures on the right of each Road is the Distance of the several Towns, &c. from London; that on the left, the Distance from Town to Town, which is placed opposite to the Space betwixt the Two Names
